To whom it may concern:

Paulina Modlitba is a visiting student who has been working with my group. During her time at the Lab this fall, she took my course, MAS 632. Although she could not register for it, she did all the assignments, and would have gotten an "A" grade for her work in the subject.

When she came, I waived the TOEFL test. Her English is superb, and it is only through a very slight accent that you would know she was not a native speaker. It would be silly to have her take this test, as her language skills are more than adequate for graduate work at M.I.T.
