Handout: The most important people in my life right now

Look at these three circles. The center of the circle represents you. People who are important to you are in the surrounding circles. The central circle includes those people to whom you feel so close that it is hard to imagine life without them. The next circle represents people who are important to you. The final circle is people you have not already mentioned who are close, and important enough to place in your social network.

Write down the name of initials of each person, underline the ones who live in your community, and put a triangle besides the name of everyone older than 18.
