

We aim to organize youth to become agents of change in their neighborhood. Young people usually have the time, the energy, the will, the basic skills, and the right to participate and help improve the quality of life in the places where they live. What they lack is appropriate space, support and recognition.

The YOUNG ACTIVISTS NETWORK

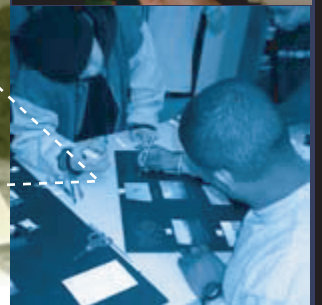

seeks new members for its volunteer task force to develop new tools, activities, and support materials as we expand in 2004.

We work in partnership with existing initiatives and focus on youth participation, concrete community challenges, and contextualized uses of technology.

YAN helps transform existing community technology centers into community empowering spaces that offer the basic technical and human resources necessary to foster sustainable youth-led social change.
